Park Superintendent Reports Them In Much Better Condition Than a Year

Supt. of Parks George C. Walker has begun the spraying of all the elm rees of the city for the purpose of detroying the larvae of the elm tree seetle and such of the beetles as have beetle and such of the beetles as have advanced beyond the egg stage. The trees in all the parks and on every street in the city will be visited in turn by the spraying apparatus, which is owned by the park department men. They have become expert in its use and it is a lively and intelligent beetle that escapes the spray. The work will take about three weeks, but it will preserve the appearance of the foliage of the cim trees and save many of the trees themselves from death.

Supt. Walker states that he finds the trees in the parks and about the Elixir of Senna, as it acts gently on ing the system effectually, when con-Supt. Walker states that he finds the trees in the parks and about the streets of the city without exception in much better condition than they were last year. The spraying done at that time has had excellent results, as the decline of the pest this year shows.—

Automobile Demolished by Trolley Car —Mrs. Willis Mitchell Breaks Her Arm-Mr. and Mrs. George Richmond Return.

An automobile owned by Hollis Price came to grief Sunday evening at Quiambaug, near Elias Wilcox's. In the auto were Mr. Price, Mrs. James Cooper and little son, Norris. They had been calling on Mrs. Elizabeth Thorpand when leaving the yard did not hear or see the trolley and as they crossed the tracks were struck sideways by the trolley car, making a total wreck of the car. Norris Cooper was thrown out and was not injured very hadly. Mrs. Cooper received some slight bruises, while Mr. Price's hand was hurt badly. The automobile was taken to Nye's garage for repairs.

THE MAN AND THE BURGLAR. Would Not Most Men Do the Same Thing Under the Same Circumstances?

In my own case, when the burglar introduced himself to my sleeping apartment I was lying flat on my back in bed. The gaslight was burning sufficiently to afford light to see the intruder was no beauty. With a patch over one eye and a much battered nose, red and bulbous enough at the end to warrant conclusion that robbing apartments was not his only accomplishment, and a heavy undershot jaw, he represented a typical thug, quite equal to any emergency his predatory life might call for.

He carried a buildog pattern of pistol, over which he squinted the unpatched eye, pointing the gun at my head.

head.

It did not require two seconds' concentration of thought for me to recognize that the preponderance of advantage was decidedly with the burglar, so figuratively, I kept in the modest background, saying nothing.

Part of my wearing apparel hung at the head of the bed and the remainder at the foot. He gathered up the first, and as he passed along said:
